

SOMEONE'S CHEATING

Hey, my name's Hope. I'm 13 years old. Right now I'm in the middle of a VERY important test. I look to my right and I see Bitsy Berg cheating off my test! I HATE cheating, especially by someone OLDER than you. Don't you think you'd be cheating on the older one? Plus it's like winning unfairly. Sure it wasn't a study party! Anyway, the school I go to is huge. I'm usually one of the kids who stands in the background while the other kids who stand in the spotlight. My goal is easy. I want to do good in school, get into a good college, so my dream of being a dancer will come true. I don't respect cheaters. I also don't respect popular people, mean girls/boys at school, or the bully's. I only respect E people, teachers, the principal and my friends. Enough about me, back to the story.

I knew she was cheating because she kept looking at MY paper and writing the same answer on HER paper. I was about to get up and tell a teacher but then I was convinced not to. My first reason was because she's WAY older than me. She can easily yell at me or hurt me in weird ways. My second reason was because Bitsy's always breaking the rules in class, there's note passing, there's texting, there's ear bud phone calls, there's talking, there's eating and of course, cheating. When the class was over, we got our homework and went home. That night while I was studying for finals, I couldn't stop thinking about Bitsy so I decided to tell a teacher. So the next morning I told the teacher. Bitsy got one month in detention and we both had to re-take the test. She did yell at me, but I don't care.

The End – and remember, Don't Cheat!